WHY TRANSPOREA?

We believe that there is a lack of possibilities for travel agents as well as charter flights companies to utilise what they are best at. A travel agency approaches the masses but have no means of utilising their transportation on its own. On the contrary, there is a limited target market for the companies having available aircrafts on the ground.

GOAL

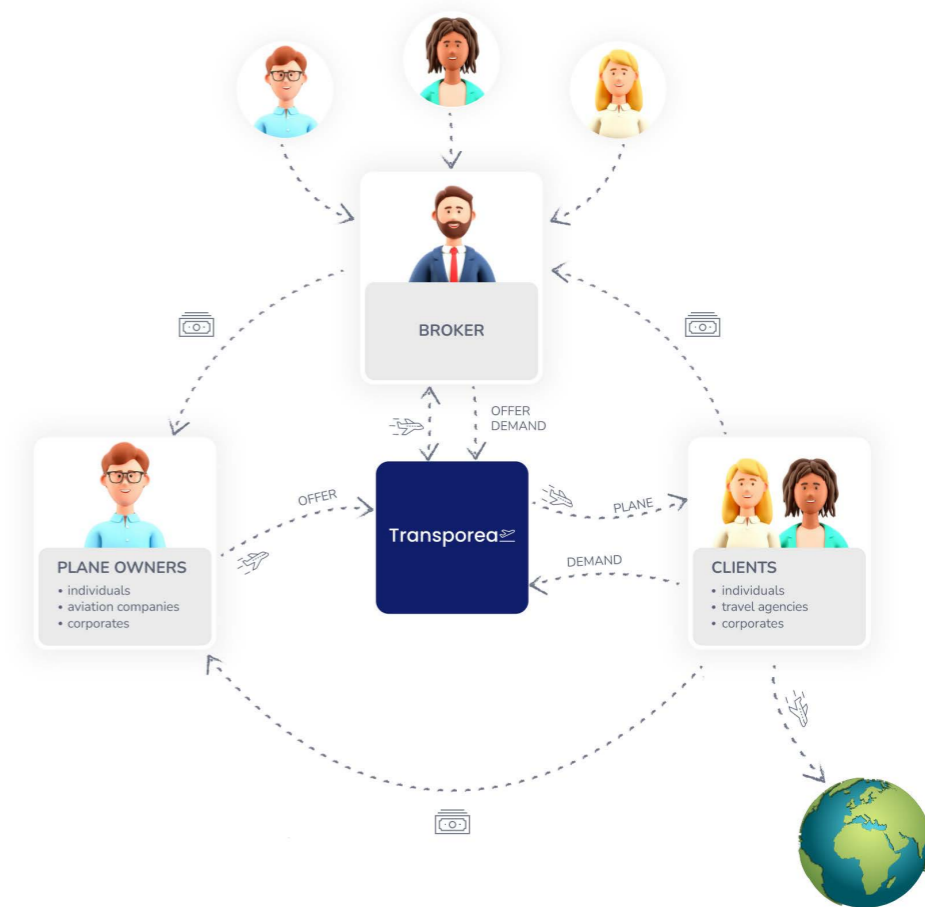

By developing Transporea we wish to connect these two segments of traveling by allowing them to easily approach each other with a tool that has been so common in the world. There have been countless projects thriving after they have joined services of different providers into an easy-to-use platform. We do not hesitate to admit that we have been inspired by projects such as Booking or Skyscanner, after seeing the end users being able to reserve the requested service much quicker and getting a chance to pick from all availabilities while the providers get a chance to enlist their services to bigger audience.

It is our opinion that by reducing time with having everything in one platform and increasing each user's reach we can create an environment that will benefit the whole industry. Continuous availability of aircrafts and charter flight inquiries with all specifications given upfront will contribute to larger number of successful communications between the ones who have flying capacities and the ones who need to fly, thus increasing the charter flights all over the world.
